

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A session initiation protocol message includes confidentiality protection in that the sender of the message is identified using a temporary identity index generated by calculating a hash function for a private key and public information which indicates the sender. The result of the calculation of the hash function is the temporary identity index and is associated with a 5 specific sender-receiver pair.